Dr Paul Flecknell, Professor Emeritus, Newcastle University, and Lead Consultant and Director, Flaire Consultants Ltd.

Paul is a graduate of Cambridge Veterinary School and has specialist qualifications in veterinary anaesthesia and analgesia, and in laboratory animal medicine, and a PhD in physiology. He is an Emeritus Professor at Newcastle University, having retired from the role of Director of the animal facilities in 2017.

He has been undertaking research in the field of animal welfare for over 30 years, with a particular interest in anaesthesia and analgesia of all animals. His current work is focussed on developing methods of analgesia for mice. He has also been developing teaching and training resources to promote best practice in anaesthesia and analgesia for over 30 years. He is currently co-developing a series of e-learning programs to support training in anaesthesia and analgesia, assessment of severity, study design and evaluation of protocols.

His hobbies are birdwatching, wildlife photography, hiking and computer gaming.
